

Faculty

At the heart of any great law school is a great faculty. Fordham Law is home to an outstanding group of 65 full-time professors and over 200 adjunct professors. As scholars, they have been published in all of the top law reviews and have been cited in decisions by the Supreme Court.

Their true expertise, however, lies in their teaching. Our faculty is committed to preparing students for the practice of law and to stimulating their interest in legal scholarship. Perhaps most importantly, our professors help students understand their responsibilities as legal professionals to their clients and their communities.