

Welcome

The Fordham International Law Journal is one of the most competitive international law periodicals in the world and the fourth most cited international student-run legal periodical in the United States, according to a study done by the Washington and Lee University School of Law.

The ILJ's ongoing involvement with the global, national, and local legal communities remains prominent. In association with Fordham's Crowley Program on International Human Rights, the ILJ annually publishes the Crowley Report, a survey of the Program's yearly international human rights mission. In the Fall, the Journal assists in the organization and production of the Fordham Corporate Law Institute's annual conference on International Antitrust Law and Policy, as well as the New York City Bar Association's annual reception for the Legal Advisers of the Foreign Ministries of the United Nations.
